

The Energetics of Multidimensionality

By Suzy Miller

From my vantage point, most if not all individuals who have a true diagnosis of autism have not had many 3/4 if any 3/4 previous human physical incarnations. These are big beings in children's bodies who are much more comfortable in other dimensional experiences than they are in the current human condition.

Through telepathy, it was shared that these souls last incarnated en masse at the time of Lemuria; thus, their presence among us means that something has changed within the collective consciousness. Twenty-five years ago, few of them existed here; now they CAN be here en masse, which is VERY exciting to me.

It is also true that even though this population is physically here, their attention point is still very much in other, largely "unseen," dimensional realms.

Because it is almost impossible for me to explain these higher dimensional experiences in words, let's start with the premise that as your dimensional awareness increases, density decreases, and with less density, there is a reduced sense of separation.

Let's also assume for a moment that the dimensional energy of these children truly knows itself and functions as ONE. From this vantage point, it makes sense that skills such as telepathy, inter-dimensional connections, and experiences beyond the confines of time and space would be commonplace.

The best pointer I can give you to their experience and your connection to it is to ask: If you were ONE with all things what would you know and experience?

From a dimensional vantage point these children are light years ahead of us in their consciousness. They have often stated, “We are the new technology... the technology of love...the technology of consciousness.”

Those of you that have had your own multidimensional experiences through meditation or other practices may have tapped into other realms and thus have your own reference point for the children’s experiences. Some of you may have limited or no awareness regarding how these children experience the world. Either way, I know this course can open that opportunity to you when the time is right. I also know that your own experiences will teach you more than I ever could about other dimensions. So, for now, let’s agree that we can have no real reference for the multidimensional experiences of these sensitive individuals, at least not until we are ready to experience them for ourselves.
