

The Energetics of the Soul

By Suzy Miller

The soul experience for children diagnosed with autism is similar to that of anyone else, in that the Soul is the over-lighting energetic pattern, not just of our human incarnations, but of ALL our incarnations. Thus, the Soul holds vast wisdom related to your path at this time, your chosen experiences, and what skill sets you have already mastered, as well as those that you can easily develop. The Soul holds your Divine Blueprint.

There is no way within our current limited cognitive awareness that the mind could grasp the full scope of the soul's wisdom. This is why, as humans, we frequently ask questions like "Why would a child want to have an experience of autism?" The Soul's information becomes more accessible as we integrate more aspects of our life experiences. It is not until we ourselves are more conscious of our own soul's journey that we can get a real glimpse of why these children are here and what they naturally offer to humanity.

At a soul level, these children choose perfectly for their life experience, just as you did. From the soul's perspective, nothing is broken and everything is a possibility and potential for greater awareness for Self and humanity. This greater expression of SELF is what these children offer us as a potential and possibility.

The major difference for this population is that they function primarily from a descending perspective versus an ascending perspective, meaning that they are attempting to bring their broader awareness and experience into the human condition. From a soul perspective, these children support humanity's ability to understand what no longer supports the human condition. By being here alone, they will draw attention to that which challenges the evolution of humanity. Consider the attention they have already drawn to systems of education, medicine, and diet to name just a few!
